HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP)—Two U.S. Air Force planes of the Gemini two-man space project collided during a parachute operation and crashed into the Atlantic Ocean Monday on a test rescue mission filmed for training purposes.

There were 24 men in the simulated rescue—12 in each plane—and Monday night there were only seven known survivors.

An Air Force spokesman at Kindley Air Force Base said seven men were rescued, five bodies were recovered and 12 others were missing as a search continued off Bermuda's south coast.

Reds Pursued In Congo

BUKAVU, Congo (AP)—Congo army forces inched forward Monday in Lukewarm pursuit of Communist-backed rebel warriors whose threat against this eastern Congo city has been shattered by fighter-bomber air attacks.

Tribal warfare and rebellion raged on in other eastern areas on the eve of a U.N. troop withdrawal from the Congo.

Pigeon Villain In Timepiece

HEYWOOD, England (AP)—The eight-month mystery of Heywood's tardy town clock finally has been solved.

"The villain was a pigeon," said William Theaker, Heywood's lighting superintendent.

Last November, the big clock on a church tower in the heart of the town lost time for the first time within living memory. There were so many complaints a group of workmen went up the 60-foot tower to investigate. They could find nothing wrong.

The clock was slow again the next day.

"The clock is so much a part of the people's lives that many rely on it instead of watches, and the slowness of the clock upset life more than you might imagine," a councilman said.

Educator Urges Segregation End

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—The United States must "end for all time the blight of segregation wherever it exists and in whatever forms and shapes it assumes," U.S. Commissioner of Education Francis H. Keppel said Monday.

"Whether it be blatant in the South or subtle in the North, it says and diminishes democracy and justice," Keppel said.

RFK Puts Finger On Lee Oswald

KRAKOW, Poland (AP)—Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy said Monday night "there is no question" that Lee Harvey Oswald killed President John F. Kennedy and "did it on his own and by himself."

Kennedy spoke publicly on the assassination of his brother in reply to a question from a Polish student during his second day of tumultuous emotional welcomes from Polish street crowds.

The Kennedy party serenaded cheering Poles in this old university city, improvising "When Polish Eyes Are Smiling" to the tune of the famous Irish song.

Transatlantic Swimmer Lost

NEW YORK (AP)—A report that a woman transatlantic swimmer was missing off Long Island Monday led the U.S. Coast Guard to dispatch surface vessels and aircraft to the area.

The swimmer, Britt Sullivan, 29, was said to have missed a rendezvous with an escort ship, that had moved about a quarter of a mile ahead of her, and then waited for her to catch up.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the search covered 900 square miles of the Atlantic. He described the weather as ideal and the sea smooth.

Market Hits Peak Levels

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market, as measured by some averages, inched up Monday to all-time high levels in a quiet session.

Volume declined to 4.39 million shares from 4.46 million Friday.

ICC Formally Asked For Public Hearing

STROUDSBURG — The 11-man Interstate Commerce Commission was formally asked yesterday to hold a public hearing on the Marshall Creek truck explosion disaster, according to Frank W. Doyle, acting district director of the ICC in charge of the investigation.

"There is a strong likelihood that our accident report will be made public by the ICC whether or not there is a public hearing," Doyle told the Daily Record last night.

Doyle, who interviewed American Cyanamid Co. officials in Pottsville yesterday and returned to Stroudsburg last night, said:

"A recommendation went today from the ICC Bureau of Inquiry and Compliance in Washington to the 11-man commission asking that a public hearing be held and that the matter be assigned to one commissioner and an examiner to determine the cause of the accident. 'The hearing possibly could lead to a revision in our code of regulations.'"

Doyle said that a public hearing, if approved, would probably be held in Stroudsburg and not in Washington.

Kenneth Davis, director of the ICC office in Scranton, said, "Our investigators at the scene have found no violation of the law in regards to hauling the explosives."

ing caps) but they can not be packed in the same container," he concluded.

The truck carried 4,000 pounds of 60 per cent gelatin dynamite, 26,000 pounds of nitro-carbonate, and 89 electric blasting caps.

He added that investigators from Pennsylvania State Police and ICC investigators from the Philadelphia office, continued the investigation in Hazleton and Pottsville yesterday.

Davis said that nitro-carbonate is made by mixing ammonium nitrate and fuel oil. Davis said it is not classified as an explosive by his agency.

Marsh Witness

James R. Marsh, Monroe County district attorney, said last night he has found a witness at the scene after the truck explosion who talked to the driver, Albert Koda, when Koda had returned to the site.

According to Marsh, the witness quoted Koda as saying "The tire was on fire. . . I went to get help." When the witness asked Koda how he knew a tire was on fire, Koda allegedly said, "I was the driver."

Marsh did not disclose the name of the witness, but said the witness talked to Koda near his cab and remembers the name "Cyanamid" on it.

Koda told State Police he returned to the scene after hearing the explosion, ran into heavy traffic, parked his cab, walked to the scene, saw some bodies and the truck burning, started to feel sick and left the scene a second time.

Albert Koda, when reached at his home in Port Carbon yesterday, said, "I have nothing to say. These are orders from my attorney, you'll have to talk to him. I'm sorry."

When asked the name of his attorney, Koda replied, "I think his name is Kitzler, he's from Stroudsburg." Koda said, in reply to a question, that the attorney had been retained by American Cyanamid Co., owners of the truck.

Koda also said he plans to retain an attorney on his own, but has not done so yet.

The Daily Record contacted Stroudsburg Attorney James T. Kitzler, the only local attorney whose name resembles that given by Koda. Asked if he had been retained to represent Koda, Kitzler said, "I have nothing to say. I can't answer now."

State Police Lt. Edward Swatji, troop commander at Hazleton, yesterday said, "State Police did not try to keep anything secret about the blasting caps in the truck. I did not learn of them until Saturday night and that was after we went over the reports of state police investigation."

"As of this date State Police do not plan any arrests, but if the case crystallizes with proof pointing to an arrest one will be made, or if at the conclusion of our investigation we have enough evidence for an arrest we will make one," he concluded.

The presence of blasting caps in the explosives truck was not disclosed by state police until Sunday. The cyanamid company said it notified state police Friday of the presence of the caps.

Lt. Swatji said Sunday the 89 electric blasting caps each had 100 feet of spool wire attached and that they were at the rear doors of the trailer.

FBI Expands Search For Rights Workers

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP)—Federal and state agencies pressed ahead Monday for clues in the eight-day-old disappearance of three young civil rights workers.

Farm ponds were dragged. Motorists were quizzed at a roadblock near the spot where the trio's chartered station wagon was found last Tuesday.

The White House said the search was being expanded and intensified. President Johnson kept in touch with the situation.

For the first time, the FBI began distributing over Mississippi and the four surrounding states pictures and descriptions of the missing youths—Andy Goodman, 20, and Michael Schwerner, 24, both of New York, and James Chaney, 22, a Negro from nearby Meridian.

Goodman, Schwerner and Chaney dropped from sight the night of June 21. They posted a $20-bond here for speeding and headed south toward Meridian. Their burned station wagon was found two days later 13 miles northeast of here at the edge of a swamp.

In New York, civil rights leader James Forman said he had information their bodies had been stuffed with rocks and tossed in a river. Forman, chief of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, did not give the source of his information.

The Pearl River in this east-central Mississippi region was dragged without results during the weekend. Dragging operations turned Monday to private ponds that dot the area. A few landowners were reluctant to allow the dragging teams on their lakes; most cooperated.

A hundred sailors from the Navy's airfield near Meridian rejoined the FBI and Mississippi Highway Patrol in combing the red-clay hills and snake-infested bays.

DETROIT (AP)—On the eve of bargaining sessions with the United Auto Workers Union, General Motors Corp. described its 354,000 hourly workers as "among the best paid industrial employees in the world."

GM, citing dollars and cents payments to hourly-rated employees, mailed the booklets Monday to its 325,000 UAW members.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther will lead a delegation into GM headquarters here Tuesday to start what is expected to be a summer-long bargaining campaign with the auto industry.

Negotiations begin Wednesday with Ford Motor Co., Thursday with Chrysler, and July 8 with American Motors. Profits of the automakers are the biggest in history, and so is the UAW list of proposals.

In the booklet, GM said its hourly-rated employees earned an average of $7,500 in 1963, in addition to benefits averaging $1,025 a year.

In April, average straight-time pay in GM plants was $3.01 an hour, it said. With extra benefits and overtime pay, the average climbs to $3.95.

Hourly wage earnings of GM workers, excluding overtime premiums, are now 27 per cent higher than those of the average employee in U.S. manufacturing, the booklet said.

OSLO, Norway (AP)—Soviet Premier Khrushchev doubly stepped ashore Monday to a few scattered cheers, one lone sign of greeting, and a polite but reserved official welcome.

The public chill that had dogged him in Sweden and Denmark on his tour of Scandinavia pursued him to Norway, and Khrushchev seemed well aware of it, one ashore.

The ancient Akershus fortress boomed out a 21-gun salute for Khrushchev as the Soviet luxury liner Bashkiriya anchored in Oslo's harbor after a two-day voyage from Sweden.

Premier Einar Gerhardsen, a staunch supporter of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization with the West, greeted Khrushchev at a red-carpeted pier near Oslo's lowering City Hall.

Sun-tanned and hatless, Khrushchev stepped ashore from a bobbing launch from the Bashkiriya and spryly—he is 70—bolted up the pier's steps to greet the tall Norwegian.

But the crowd of 3,000 lined the street in front of the City Hall was passive. Some politely applauded and there were a few cheers.

An elderly woman waved her umbrella and shouted: "Murderer!" until a policeman put a white-gloved hand over her mouth and hustled her away.

About 100 workers at a nearby shipyard lined the railings of a tanker under construction and displayed a banner reading "Welcome Nikita." There were no other welcome signs.

Scranton Hits Barry As Ignorant, Afraid

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton roared the South Monday to accuse U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater, his rival for the Republican presidential nomination, of "ignorance" and "fear."

Scranton declared in a statement here that Goldwater's positions on making Social Security voluntary; opposition to federal aid for higher education; proposed termination of all farm price supports, could not be ascribed "to malice." "I think that ignorance must be the explanation," said Scranton. "He is simply talking off the top of his head."

Monday morning in Charlotte, N.C., Scranton told a news conference that Goldwater had canceled such things as news conferences because "it may be he is afraid." In a telephone hookup with his New York City headquarters, Scranton said

"It is clear that Sen. Goldwater has now been stopped," said Scranton at Charlotte. But he declined again to specify any delegate changes.

There were no signs in any of the states Scranton visited Monday—North Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee—of any swingover of delegates to Scranton's cause, especially Goldwater delegates.

With an eye to his Southern audience, Scranton did not hammer the civil rights issue, but he did allude to it in an address to GOP leaders in Atlanta.

"We believe," said Scranton, "that the honorable doctrine of states rights should not be used to set South against North, to set East against West, to set black man against white man."

In his Knoxville statement, Scranton attacked statements by Goldwater that the governor said indicated "the favors selling the Tennessee Valley Authority—even if it had to be sold for only one dollar."

Goldwater aides deny he ever made such a proposal. The suggestion came during a television remark that atomic defoliation "could well be done."

At Andrews Air Force Base, Lodge was similarly careful to be positive. For example, he was asked about a suggestion that atom bombs be used to burn the leaves off trees and bushes in South Viet Nam so the Red guerrillas would have no cover. "That makes as much sense as Nam, but we do it with weed killers," he said.

State News Roundup

Vote Count Probe By FBI

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation is investigating reports of vote count irregularities in the April 28 Democratic primary election here.

Burke Marshall, head of the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice ordered the inquiry.

A spokesman for the Justice Department said there were "specific places" under investigation, but declined to say which ones.

He said "we are not at the point yet where we can determine whether there is anything wrong. There is no talk so far of a federal grand jury investigation."

The department acted on reports from the Philadelphia office of the FBI in May, he said, and newspaper clippings reporting vote count errors.

Wild Axed By Hatch Act

HARRISBURG (AP)—Carl W. Wild has been dismissed as a deputy secretary of highways, it was disclosed Monday, for alleged political activity in 1962.

A federal Civil Service Commission ruled earlier this year that Wild was in violation of the Hatch Act by allegedly soliciting funds for a Democratic dinner in 1962.

The Highways Department is covered by the Hatch Act, which prohibits political activities, because it receives substantial federal funds.

In a letter dated June 9, Highways Secretary Henry D. Harrel told Wild his employment was terminated effective June 13.

Harrel said he regretted the action because "you have served well," adding:

"I find no support for the commission's findings."

Scranton Team Opens NU Office

NEW YORK (AP)—A fast-of-five pain job and a long distance father-daughter phone call Monday marked the opening of Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton's New York headquarters.

"Hello, daddy," 18-year-old Susan Scranton greeted her father on the phone.

"Hi, sweetheart," responded her father from Charlotte, N.C., where he had just arrived by plane.

Susan told him that the headquarters was crowded with enthusiastic people and that "it's just wonderful."

Scranton, who seeks the Republican presidential nomination, asked more than 200 of his supporters present for the occasion to "go out and get every delegate you can."

Morse Talks Up Redistricting

HARRISBURG (AP)—Democratic State Chairman Otis B. Morse took issue with the state Justice Department Saturday and declared that a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision on legislative apportionment did not pertain to Pennsylvania.

The court ruled in an Alabama case that both houses of a bicameral state legislature must be apportioned on a population basis.

The Alabama ruling would have no effect on Pennsylvania's 1963 reapportionment law being challenged before the high court.

Democrats have charged that a Pennsylvania limitation on the number of state senators from each county and a requirement that every county receive at least one House member are unconstitutional.

"The recent federal court actions bar directly and indirectly on Pennsylvania's continuing reapportionment crisis," Morse said in a letter to Gov. Scranton. "It is impossible to ignore this fact."

State Cuts Out Free Place Mats

HARRISBURG (AP) — The state has discontinued distributing free place mats to restaurants and school cafeterias, according to Harry T. Brainerd, traffic safety director.

Brainerd said Saturday that four million of the white, yellow and green paper mats were given out since last September, but that the supply now was exhausted with no funds available to print another issue. The place mats were inscribed, "See Pennsylvania First—And See It Safely."

Monroe Sportsmen Blamed In Part For Antlerless Deer License Fiasco

EAST STROUDSBURG—John H. Doebling, district game protector for Monroe County, recently laid some of the blame for last fall's antlerless deer license fiasco on the actions of local sportsmen.

Doebling spoke at a panel discussion on conservation at East Stroudsburg State College recently. The discussion was the windup of a summer-session field course in conservation given by the geography department.

Also on the panel were Gerald Robinson, district forester, and A. Norman Dietrick, federal conservationist for the Monroe Co. soil district.

Doebling said that the number of antlerless deer permits issued in any county is determined by the size of the herd there, and whether it is too large or too small. The larger the herd, the more it must be reduced, the greater the number of antlerless permits the state can issue, he said.

He pointed out that a county cannot maintain an infinite number of deer. If the herd gets too large, many deer will starve. In addition, Doebling said, in a county which is agriculturally or dependent economically upon a tree crop, too large a deer population will mean extensive and prohibitively costly damage by the hungry animals.

The state therefore issues the number of antlerless deer permits it feels necessary to keep the herd in areas open to public hunting within reasonable size limits.

In Monroe, Doebling said, there are large areas of land controlled by individuals or hunting clubs which are not hunted heavily, and where antlerless deer are not hunted at all.

The results, he continued, are a herd too large for the area, and extensive browse damage. The state has no control whatsoever over the size of this herd. "We have to wait for them to starve to death," he said.

The result, Doebling implied, is that the state can issue only enough antlerless permits to control the size of the deer population in the part of the county not controlled by these individuals and clubs.

All three of the participants agreed that the greatest problem they face is lack of public education good conservation practices. The outmoded belief that hunting does always is harmful was cited as an example by Doebling.

Despite their problems with education, they said they did get great public support.

State Studies Hospital Cost

HARRISBURG (AP) — The governor's hospital study commission disclosed Tuesday that it will attempt "to halt the spiraling cost" of hospital care in Pennsylvania.

Arlin M. Adams, secretary of public welfare and chairman of the commission, said the steps will be taken in order to avoid accompanying increases in hospitalization insurance plans such as Blue Cross.

Franklin's funeral, in 1790, was attended by 20,000 mourners.

NOW... Insurance costs LESS for

TOTAL ELECTRIC HOMES

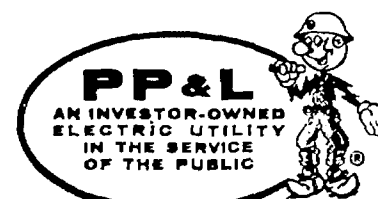

All PP&L customers living in Total Electric Homes can now take advantage of lower premiums for home owners' policies.

Until recently, insurance costs for Total Electric Homes, as well as for homes with a combination of electric and flame-type equipment, were exactly the same.

This has been changed!

National Union Insurance Companies and the Northeastern Fire Insurance Company of Pennsylvania now offer home owners' insurance for Total Electric Homes at 10% less premium cost than for homes using other forms of energy. This is another benefit for the homeowner who has FLAMELESS, electric home heating, cooking, water heating, and laundry drying.

For information on this and all the other benefits of electric heating—in your present home or the home you plan to build—call your PP&L office.

Also, the municipal rate to public school districts and to cities, counties, townships and boroughs is included in the new rate reduction. For electric space heating service and for year-round air conditioning service, the last step of the rate will be reduced one-third for specified increased hours of use. Last December, a rate reduction was approved for resale service to certain municipalities in the Metropolitan Edison Company territory.

Blast Site Back To Normal But Snake Sign Still Stands

By Charles McNett
Daily Record Reporter
ECHO LAKE — Traffic looks pretty normal as one heads north along Rt. 209 toward the site of Friday morning's truck explosion.

You have to look closely to find signs that you're approaching the scene. The first obvious reminder is a billboard, "See Live Rattlesnakes Milked For Venom. Pocono Reptile Farm."

The farm is no more. Marshalls Creek was calm, almost sleepy in the summer sun, yesterday as travelers passed through.

Then, without realizing it, one arrives at the blast site. It looks like an ordinary road construction job now. "Slow Down. Road Construction Ahead. Single Lane Traffic. Flagman Ahead," the signs read, familiar black letters on yellow boards.

Northbound traffic is detoured a few hundred yards down a country road and back onto Rt. 209. Southbound traffic flows smoothly past the now almost obliterated crater.

At the site of the blast itself, there are two piles of rubbish, remains of the "Ham House" and the snake farm. They looked as if they had been intentionally torn down.

The inevitable tourists wandered about, cameras clicking. Several self-appointed guides explained the site to people in cars from Massachusetts, Ohio, "Just passing through."

"State highway department workmen have leveled the crater, and were about to begin resurfacing. It looked as if they were repaving a badly winter heaved section of roadway."

If one looked closely, there were reminders of the grim tragedy. A station wagon in which Mrs. Lillian Paesch was killed hauled to one side, squashed out of shape like a plastic toy left too long in the sun. Near a shattered tree stump lay a torn fireman's boot and a scrap of red checkered woolen shirt.

Just a little to the north is the Middle Smithfield School, paneless windows covered with sheets of cardboard. The floors inside are littered with broken glass and carelessly flung books.

Mrs. Pickel's reason was that she had obtained a teaching position in Phillipsburg, N.J. Mrs. Young gave no reason for her resignation.

Mrs. Masters said she would be unable to accept full time work next year.

Miss Nash resigned to accept another position. The others gave no details of their reasons for resigning.

Hired were Miss June Sadtler, a mathematics teacher at a starting salary of $4,850.

Miss Linda J. Kinkel was hired as a secretary in the district office at a starting salary of $2,600 a year.

The committee tabled until its next meeting the election of a solicitor for the school year of 1964-65.

In other action the board appointed Arthur Stoffel insurance broker for the new school district.

— Granted permission to Northampton County Civil Defense to use the new high school building as a 200-bed hospital in the event of a CD emergency.

— Awarded a pest control contract to Eastern Termite and Pest Control Inc. of Havertown. The firm will treat the cafeterias of the four schools in the district at a low bid of $17.50 per month.

Old Books Offered

Two Auto Accident Suits Filed In Monroe Court

STROUDSBURG — Two trespass suits stemming from automobile accidents were filed yesterday in the office of Frank Smith, Monroe County prothonotary.

Both suits were filed by Attorney John J. Pentz, Jr. of Stroudsburg.

One suit was for Robert W. and Susan A. Baird, and Terrence Baird, 13, all of Stroudsburg, against Margaret M. Ruskin of Sciota. It asks damages in excess of $10,000.

The other suit is for Gladys M. Bellis of East Stroudsburg against Anna Ray of Trenton, N.J. It asks $205 in damages.

In the Baird-Ruskin suit, the action claims that on April 14, 1963, at about 9 a.m. Susan Baird was driving north on N. Sixth St. in Stroudsburg and entered the intersection of N. 6th and Sarah Sts.

It further claims that Margaret Ruskin was headed west on Sarah St. and failed to stop at the stop sign there. It alleges that the Ruskin car collided with the right rear of the Baird vehicle.

Susan Baird's injuries were a sprain of the right ankle, contusions of the shoulders and arms. She wore a neck brace for five days, according to the suit. Also, she required medical attention and lost time at her job. Her count asks $10,000.

Terrence's injuries include bruises and cuts of the right side and hip, numbness of the hip and leg, according to the suit. He also required medical attention.

Also, Mrs. Ruth Livingston, owner of the demolished snake farm is listed in fair condition. She is suffering from lacerations and shock. Mrs. Marion Sherman of East Stroudsburg, RD 1, is also listed in fair condition, and suffering from lacerations and shock.

The 'Pro' Man

Henry Cabot Lodge has returned from his post as American ambassador to South Viet Nam to join the stop-Goldwater movement of Governor William Scranton.

But he said yesterday that he is not anti-Goldwater but pro-Scranton. "I am a 'pro' man myself," he said.

There was no mistaking his anti-Goldwater message, however.

"I believe both parties must nominate prudent men, not impulsive men, and I think Governor Scranton is one of our best men," Lodge said.

He immediately ran into difficulties with other Republicans who want to use the Democratic administration conduct of war in South Viet Nam as a political issue in the coming Presidential campaign.

Lodge, a major voice in the formulation of South Viet Nam policy during the past 10 months as ambassador to Saigon, is not in a position to criticize that policy very loudly.

Scranton has said he considers Viet Nam policy a major issue in the coming campaign. Senator Barry Goldwater has felt this way for some time.

Lodge said yesterday he doesn't think it would make a good Republican campaign issue because it will not win the Republicans many votes.

We tend to agree with him. American foreign policy should be as non-political as possible. It has been in South Viet Nam because Lodge, a Republican, was serving Democratic administration in Washington. He did an excellent job there.

The history of American foreign policy proves that neither party is better than the other in the matter of foreign policy. For some strange reason, things don't seem to go any better or any worse whether Democrats or Republicans are in the White House.

President Johnson, after a few months of indecision on South Viet Nam, has now taken a very tough line with the Red Chinese, the North Vietnamese and the Communist guerillas in South Viet Nam.

He has threatened the Chinese with war and said we are willing and able to fight it. His tough statements are not only for Chinese, but also for Republican ears. They will serve to cut off criticism of a "soft" policy in Southeast Asia.

Lodge is probably right. South Viet Nam is not going to win many votes for the Republicans. Especially if they talk about fighting a bigger war—something most Americans do not want.

At this point in post World War history, the mood of America is something like this—We want to defeat the Communists in Southeast Asia and push them back. But we are not willing to fight a major war to accomplish that.

Hospital Meets Emergency

The General Hospital of Monroe County was as calm as the eye of a hurricane Friday as 10 injured people were brought in from the truck explosion scene.

Efficient operation of the hospital's emergency plan and the skill of experienced doctors operating under pressure saved the lives of Richard McDonough and Robert Heid, two Marshalls Creek firemen who were near the truck when it exploded, killing three other firemen and three other people.

"Everything ran very smoothly. I'm very proud of the outfit. They did a splendid job," said Harry J. Smith, hospital superintendent.

His pride is well justified. His praise of the doctors and hospital staff is well deserved.

The community too often thinks of its excellent hospital only as an expensive place to stay and an expensive place to keep going.

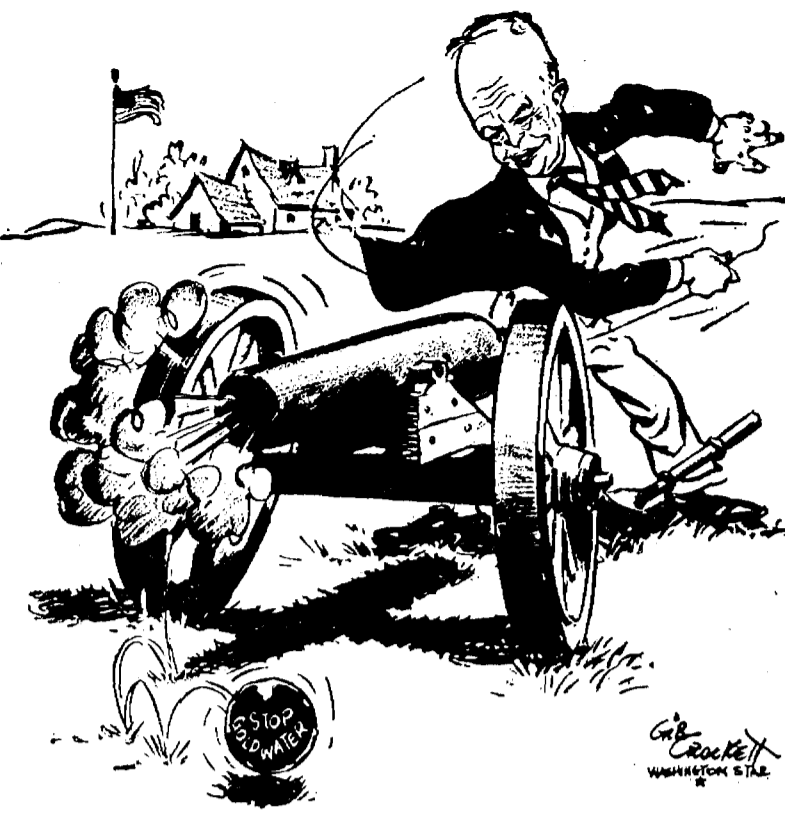

But as the community pays off its pledge for the new hospital addition to open this year, it should realize that its contributions are going to an essential institution.

It is an institution we all take for granted and do not appreciate until we are forced to go there ourselves or are suddenly made aware of its life-saving ability, as we were this weekend after the Marshalls Creek disaster.

Comment Of The Day

"American forces must take command of the forces in Viet Nam and not simply remain as advisers."

—U. S. Rep. Gerald B. Ford of Michl.

Big Gun From Gettysburg

The Pennsylvania Story

Front Office Defied

By Mason Denton
HARRISBURG — There are those who argue that Pennsylvania's legislative branch is a "captive" of the executive branch when both are controlled or dominated by the same party—a condition that existed during the 1964 legislative gatherings.

That this "can" be true and oft-times "is" true has been clearly (and at times painfully) shown by the record itself. However even under such circumstances the legislative branch can and does kick up its heels—in direct defiance of the executive branch.

As pointed out yesterday in this column, such a kicking of the traces occurred on two notable occasions in the current session, when in direct opposition to the Administration the Legislature: (1) scandal, and (2) gave Pennsylvania's 14 State Colleges a $2 million-plus boost in appropriations over what had been requested by the Administration in its original budgetary submission.

It will be recalled that it was in April that this column in a four-part series on the crisis facing the 14 state-owned institutions of higher learning pointed out statewide for the first time the critical role these facilities could and should play in helping solve the college crisis in the Keystone State—a crisis politicians have been yapping about in political hot air for the past half-dozen years.

The need for providing these colleges with more and adequate funds to meet this need was repeatedly underscored. It was in May that the House of Representatives slapped the $2 million increase for the State Colleges on the general appropriations bill, to be followed a month later by Senate approval.

For the first time the legislative branch approved more than the executive branch had requested for them!

The Scranton Administration was thrown in somewhat of a pother.

There were muted mummings and frothings from the front office that such a move would require considerable shifting of funds, fiddling with the Administration's already neatly-prepared fiscal books and so on—which drew about as much water as an empty hummingbird eggshell.

In the final analysis the point recurred as stated in this column during its four-part series April:

"While each year the Legislature authorizes larger cash grants to more and more private colleges and universities—the Commonwealth's own State Colleges have had to do with a smaller share of state funds.

It goes without saying that the legislatively-forced $2 million increase for Pennsylvania's 14 State Colleges will go a long way in helping ameliorate this unjustifiable and inequitable condition that has existed—to the exclusive benefit of Pennsylvania's overall higher education program.

Long overdue, the Legislature demonstrated this year that it is beginning to give full recognition to the critical and important role these State Colleges can play in helping solve the higher education program that has plagued the Keystone State and is destined to become more severe with each passing year.

The credit cannot in any sense be taken from the legislative branch for its determined move in this field—against the wishes of the Administration (which seemingly was caught sleeping at the twitch when it failed to initiate the program on its own in the first place!)

The same must be said of Pennsylvania's lawmakers when they moved firmly in approving the Administration-opposed legislative probe of the traffic ticket mess in Philadelphia.

Pennsylvania's oft-maligned (too often) lawmakers in recent years have clearly evidenced a greatly increased stature, generally speaking (there are always a few nuts in almost any group). The two instances cited perhaps help illustrate the point.

Robert S. Allen

The Allen-Scott Report

Career Choice

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Robert Kennedy is facing his most fateful political Rubicon.

On his return from Europe, "Bobby" must decide whether to accept a new career within the Johnson administration or continue his backstage preparations to force his way on the Democratic national ticket.

This unpublicized fork in his political road was reached by Kennedy when President Johnson offered him a chance to continue his government service in either a high-level defense or diplomatic post—depending upon his own choice.

While these private Johnson-Kennedy discussions still are inconclusive, a pre-convention decision by Kennedy is being forced by a White House-supported move by Ambassador Adlai Stevenson to go after the Democratic senatorial nomination in New York.

Twice the unsuccessful Democratic Presidential standard-bearer, Stevenson is now telling political intimates that he plans to leave his post as U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. to try to unseat GOP Senator Kenneth Keating.

Stevenson's still-to-be-announced return to the political wars will touch off a game of musical chairs within the administration, clearing the way for President Johnson to appoint Kennedy to one of at least two cabinet-level positions.

According to administration insiders, the President's discussions with the attorney general centered around his possible appointment either to Stevenson's post or as secretary of defense, although other positions were mentioned.

The consensus was that if Kennedy wanted the Pentagon post, Defense Secretary McNamara would be shifted to the Secretary Rusk, who would go to the U.N. If Kennedy decided on the U.N. post, Rusk's shift would be delayed several months.

Oliver Branch or Arrows—President Johnson's proposal, which could solve his "Kennedy problem" for several years, is being sugar-coated with "leaks" from the White House that the relationship between the President and the attorney general has considerably improved in recent weeks.

These stories, which also have met with approval at the Justice Department, have prevented a potentially explosive split in the Democratic party from breaking out into the open prior to the national convention opening in Atlantic City on August 24.

While Kennedy ponders the President's "peace" offer, both his supporters and those of the White House are continuing their guerrilla warfare to strengthen their positions for a possible convention confrontation.

In the Midwest political Jungles, President Johnson has taken the offensive in Wisconsin by selecting Senator Gaylord Nelson as campaign coordinator for that state.

This politically astute move while not decisive in controlling the state's delegation, is a definite slap at Governor John Reynolds, who is working undercover to line up the Democratic governors to support an "open contest" for the vice presidential nomination.

This maneuvering for a "free-for-all contest" goes to the heart of Kennedy's strategy to ignite a "draft" at the convention for his nomination as Johnson's running mate.

The fact that Kennedy still has not called a halt to these maneuvers is the best indication that the Rubicon is still to be crossed.

Facing The Future — The Kennedy family tragedies are having their impact on the young attorney general.

Friends say those morose newspaper photographs of "Bobby" are due in part to his "fretting" over the possibility that he may be the next target of an assassin.

When his automobile was struck from behind in a minor collision here recently, Kennedy took cover on the floor of his chauffeur-driven limousine in the belief that an attempt was being made on his life, according to a witness at the scene of the accident.

One of the occupants of the other car involved found Kennedy lying on the floor of his limousine with his briefcase protecting his head. Kennedy's big dog was still sitting on the seat.

Political Fallout — President Johnson and Attorney General Kennedy are trying to outdo each other in courting the support of Walter Reuther, head of the United Auto Workers. Since January the President has phoned the powerful labor leader 36 times. Kennedy has either met with or called Reuther 42 times. Senator Margaret Chase Smith, who has indicated that she definitely plans to have her name put in nomination at the Republican convention in San Francisco. Although Mrs. Smith has less than a dozen delegates, she will be nominated by Senator George Aiken, Vt. ... President Johnson has ordered ghost-writers to quit talking about the speeches they work on. The crackdown followed a statement by Horace Busby, a presidential aide, that he was responsible for one of Johnson's recent speeches. Other Johnson ghost-writers include Bill Moyers, Richard Goodwin and Douglas Cater. Others will be brought into the administration before the forthcoming presidential campaign.

Dear Abby

Powers of Suggestion

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I always thought mental telepathy was a lot of bunk, but because of my own experience I am now convinced that there is something to it.

I live in Glendale, California, and my boy friend lives in Buffalo, New York. As you know, it is three hours earlier in California than it is in New York. Well lately, I have been waking up at exactly 4 o'clock every morning, just as though an alarm clock had gone off. It's the craziest thing! I wake up, and when I look at the clock, it's 4 A.M. sharp. My boy friend says he gets up at 7 A.M. every morning, and the first thing he thinks of when he opens his eyes is me. I me up. His thought waves are KNOW that is what is waking just that powerful. When I tell people this, they look at me like I'm nuts. I KNOW I am right. How can I sleep through his thought waves?

IN LOVE IN GLENDALE
DEAR IN LOVE: Don't fight it. Either move into his time zone until you can marry the guy, or ask him not to think of you until 10 A.M., Eastern Standard Time.

DEAR BEWILDERED: Under the circumstances, a message of congratulations is sufficient.

CONFIDENTIAL TO VIRGINIA BEACH: I am sorry that the letter signed VIRGINIA BEACH has given you a bad time, Virginia. Speaking Of Your Health:

Doctor-Patient Relations

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Q: What is the doctor-patient relationship?

A: It is a firm bond that assures patients devotion, understanding and psychological support, in addition to treatment of bodily disease. The strength and value of the relationship is based on the sincere interest, dedication and on the faith, confidence and cooperation of the patients.

Q: Who is your doctor?

A: Your doctor and his knowledge represent years of intricate training. But he is a mortal human being. His problems are not unlike those of his patients. He has the identical worries as head of a household, as a father, and even with illness within the framework of his own family. But your doctor can be depended on to objectively evaluate his patients' problems, forgetful for the moment of his own.

Q: What are his patients?

A: His patients are those people in the community whose illnesses need professional help. These illnesses are often compounded by fears and anxieties which the doctor tries to alleviate.

Q: What's the doctor's responsibility?

A: His major responsibility is to return his patients to good health. He has the right to say, for the moment, "I don't know, but I will find out". Patients sometimes unreasonably insist that he commit himself immediately by knowing all the answers to all the problems of all patients.

Q: What are the patient's responsibilities and rights?

A: The patient has the right to seek relief from his anxieties about illness at any time in addition to treatment for his ailment. The patient's responsibility is to accept the doctor's discriminating judgment in the choice of medical or surgical treatment.

Q: How does a patient obtain an additional consultation?

A: The patient always has the right to request a confirming opinion if that added assurance is essential to him. Open and frank discussion with his physician about an additional opinion has many advantages. His doctor can not only suggest a consultant, but can present him with the medical data so vital to an objective opinion. The combined judgment then becomes of great value.

While Dr. Coleman cannot undertake to answer individual letters, he will use readers' questions in his column whenever possible and when they are of general interest. Address your letters to Dr. Coleman in care of this newspaper.

Stories Behind Words

Shoddy

In the Yorkshire factories of England the fluff or wool that was shed during the spinning process was called "shoddy," from a Middle English word "shode" to shed or divide. Later, the name was applied to cloth made from reclaimed wool.

The wool was reclaimed by shredding old garments into the original fibers. Then the fibers were spun into new cloth. The old fibers were weak. Even though new wool sometimes was mixed with the old, the resulting cloth still was of a decidedly inferior quality. Eventually "shoddy" was used to denote not only the cloth, but also any worthless thing masquerading as something of quality.

Tricky Auto Talks

By Richard Spoug

Formal contract bargaining between the United Auto Workers and the Big Three automobile companies begins on Wednesday (July 1).

Contracts expire on Aug. 31. A hot summer of hard bargaining is in store for labor and management in the automobile and farm implements industries. The United Auto Workers begin talks with General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler on July 1. Contracts with these companies expire on Aug. 31. The contract with American Motors runs out on Oct. 16.

The U.A.W. represents 570,000 at the big car companies and 600,000 others into auto parts, agricultural implements, and aerospace plants. The aim is to sign contracts on a national level that then will be implemented by equally hard bargaining at local levels.

The auto bargaining may present President Lyndon B. Johnson with his first big labor crisis. Inasmuch as both sides comes to the table with plenty of muscle, a strike is not completely out of the question. The U.A.W. has a strike fund of about $85 million. The Big Three car builders piled up profits of $2.24 billion in 1963.

Detroit now contemplates a 7.9 million car year in 1964, as against last year's 7.34 million. Sales are sizzling. The contracts run out just as the annual model changeover begins, and a lot of retooling is in the works.

Neither side really wants a strike. The makers want to hit the new model year with full momentum. Dealers have at the most a month and a half of selling days represented by their present inventories and cars on delivery. Strike benefits of $15 a week for single men and $25 a week for workers with families aren't really attractive. And no union wants to see its war chest depleted.

President Johnson in general made it clear soon after taking office that he would follow the labor guidelines of his predecessor. Labor is asked to limit its wage demands to the extent of the annual productivity increase. White House experts put this at about 3.2 per cent for the nation as a whole. But U.A.W. President Walter P. Reuther, pointing to the general sleekness of the auto makers, came up with a minimum 4.9 productivity figure for the auto industry on the eve of last March's U.A.W. convention.

Out of that meeting at Atlantic City came the union strategy for the contract talks. Early retirement was the number one topic. Members want both in autos and farm implements a formula on the order of the "85 principle": retirement when age and length of service add up to 85—at 60 with 25 years of service, at 55 with 30 years of service. Of course, they want higher pensions, too.

They want "civilized and humanized" working conditions, including two 10-minute coffee breaks in an 8-hour shift in addition to the relief time allowed for personal errands. And of course they're out for more money.

In the face of these heavy demands, Henry Ford II is talking tough. On June 23 he told a business group: "Willfulness on the part of the public, government, and management to accept a strike, if necessary, is part of the price we must pay for the preservation of free and responsible collective bargaining—whether that willingness is ever put to the test or not."

There's been quite a hassle in Washington about forcing cigarette manufacturers to label their products hazardous. Where would they stop? Automobiles are hazardous, and many a neck has been broken by falling from a horse; there are dangers in poker chips, mountain climbing, crossing the street and falling down the stairs in church. Maybe glasses made to hold double martinis should be labeled and certainly some sort of sign should be posted over the window where you open charge accounts.

About Town

Mister Clean:

Our judges have a good many odd cases to dispose during the year. Like the man and wife who just couldn't get along together. The judge asked the woman why she wanted a divorce. "For years I've had to wash his back every Saturday night." The judge blinked and asked incredulously, "Do you feel that is sufficient reason for a divorce?" Well, not exactly, "your honor," replied the wife, "but last Saturday night, his back was clean!"

We're sorry that John Glenn decided to retire from the Ohio senatorial race. We don't see why dizziness should be considered a political handicap.

LBJ Diplomacy

By George Dixon

WASHINGTON — I was lolling about the house this morning, trying to look tired and haggard from overwork, when a young woman with the cryptic name of Ymelda (pronounced "Archbishop Makarios") came bustling in without a bustle. She asked what had rendered me so fatigued.

"Springtime from Turkey to Greece," I replied.

"That's quite a sprint," said Ymelda. "How far is it, in furlongs?"

"I don't mean I actually ran from Turkey to Greece," I said. "I ran from Turkish Prime Minister Ismet Inonu to Greek Prime Minister George Papandreu. Both were here to see President Johnson about the Cyprus Crisis."

"And a very hopeful thing it was," commented Ymelda. "I was talking to under Secretary of State George W. Ball at a cocktailing for Mr. Inonu in the Turkish embassy and he said the situation in Cyprus is something that needs being seen to. Mr. Ball said it is the most potentially calamitous situation in the world today, far more threatening than anything in Vietnam, Laos, or anywhere in Southeast Asia. What do you think of that?"

"I think it's a pretty depressing view of enjoying yourself at a cocktail party," I said.

"Cocktail parties are nothing to jest about," Ymelda said reprovingly. "But what I started out to say was that if President Johnson can avert war between Turkey and Greece just by wining, dining and gabbing with a couple of guys, he should make it a practice to invite pairs of foes from all over the world."

"Maybe so," I said. "But he should see them separately, but equally, as they say in anti-civil rights circles. That's what LBJ did with Inonu and Papandreu. He invited the Turk for two days and talked to him for four hours; then he had the Greek for two days and talked to him for four hours."

Only eight hours out of four days? queried Ymelda. "What did the distinguished peace-loving visitors do with the rest of their time here?"

"I heard rumors about that," I said, looking around furtively to make sure we weren't being spied upon by Victor Walker, editor of the Athens News.

"I heard the time Inonu and Papandreu didn't spend with President Johnson discussing how to keep peace in Cyprus, each spent the time plotting how to hell the jabbers out of the other without rousing the United States to get in on the opponent's side."

"No matter what," said Ymelda, "I still think it's a good idea to have foes here, one right after the other."

"Providing they let one out the back door before letting the other in the front," I stipulated. "What pairs of opposites would you invite?"

"I think I'd start with the Governors of Alabama and Pennsylvania," said my peace-loving warmonger. "Then I'd have President Eamon De Valera of Ireland and the Prime Minister of Britain, Sir Ugly Duckling Home."

"I don't think his names Ugly Duckling," I said. "I think it's something like Alec Douglas."

"You can't tell, the way those Limeys mumble their words," said Ymelda. "Anyway, after those two pairs, I'd have Chiang Kai-Shek of Nationalist China and Mao Tse-Tung of Red China; President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic and Premier Levi Eshkol of Israel."

Relief Rolls Under Average In Keystone

President Johnson has declared unconditional war on poverty. How much of a battleground exists in Monroe County? How extensive is poverty in the Poconos. This is the fourth of five articles on poverty in Monroe County.

By FRANK PERRETTA
Record News Editor

STROUDSBURG — This spring, 2.5 per cent of Monroe County, appeared on the relief rolls. This means 1,055 persons received aid through one of the state's Public Assistance programs.

This is below the state-wide average of 3.8 per cent of those drawing public assistance.

Let's take a look at the Monroe County statistics for March:

A breakdown of 1,055 persons receiving aid in the county shows:

—677 were in the aid to dependent children group.

—196 received old age assistance.

—84 received general assistance payments.

—57 blind pension payments.

—42 disabled persons on relief.

What does this mean in dollars and cents?

Aid to dependent children made up the largest expenditure for the month receiving $17,216. This is approximately 45 per cent of the county's total of $38,658.

Next largest payment was $11,915 in old age assistance, followed by $3,873 general assistance and $1,992 for disabled people.

Those are some statistics. Let's look at the human side of the ledger now.

A family of four in Monroe County can receive a maximum monthly grant of $161.20.

But the cost of the minimum standards of health and decency is $261.80. This figure is supplied by the Pennsylvania Department of Public Assistance.

What does this mean?

It means simply that for a family of four — not on relief — the breadwinner would have to pay $441 for goods and services.

The DPA is aware of the problem.

But in the meantime, the people have to subsist and many don't know how to spend the money they receive in public assistance.

This is where the caseworker comes in.

John Bear, director of the office of public information in Harrisburg supplied this writer with charts and tables clarifying the picture.

Let's take a family of four receiving the average maximum allowance. How do you stretch $161.20?

It's tough... that's what those on relief say. It's tough, say some of the merchants with whom they deal. It's tough, say people who have a far greater income.

And the caseworker in Monroe County with characteristic professional silence is just that — silent.

Bear's charts point out that the $161.20 can be stretched in this manner:

Food, $88, clothing, $20; incidentals, $8; fuel and utilities, $14.60 and shelter $30.60. (A 30 per cent hike the shelter allowance was made earlier this month.)

One woman — articulate but wishing to remain anonymous — told us how she stretches the dollar.

"You've got to be pretty smart in the kitchen. We eat well here. There aren't any T-bone steaks but there are good thick steaks with meat in them. We eat a lot of soups, too. This way not too much of the food is wasted."

"If someone leaves a hamburger we don't make any bones about it... we use it right in spaghetti sauce."

"There are a lot of ways you can do it. One of my friends always puts one more cup of water than the Campbell can says to do. With crackers and peanut butter and jam this makes a good meal for the kids."

"We eat a lot of potatoes. That fills the kids up real good."

"You can make it do."

"But it isn't the way to live. We don't have anything left over for any fun. It got to the point that we only put the TV set on certain hours each day. That way the set is more fun and the kids don't get sick of it. It's like going to the movie when I was a kid. We went on Saturday and Sunday. Not every day."

"I sew most of the kids' clothes. My oldest — now 12 — always liked the shirts I made him. But the other kids found out his shirts are made at home and now Johnnie don't like the shirts any more..."

"But he'll be all right."

What does a family like this hope for? Does it even speculate on the children's education?

"Well, we sure don't think about college. But you can bet one thing. The kids will finish high school."

"Then maybe Johnny could get a job in the Army or Navy. That's a good life for a man."

"Sally will have to become a secretary. 'Course, she's pretty and will probably marry young. That'll take care of her."

Sometimes people just strike it bad for a short period. They're forced to go on relief. Yet they own their own homes. They have capital, so to speak. But they don't get rid of their homes for they know that they'll bounce back. Dad'll go to work. Mom'll babysit."

What happens to these people?

They pay back the money they received in the form of public assistance.

This is one phase many critics of the DPA don't speak of.

Bear said last year the DPA received $23,599 from people in Monroe County formerly getting public assistance. Of this total, he points out, $21,715 were repayments and $1,884 in restitution (collection of overpayments) spent in Monroe County in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1963 was $590,732.

Put this "paying back figure" on a state-wide level and it amounted to $5.5 million last year in Pennsylvania.

But to get back to DPA statistics here are some of the findings of the DPA:

1. — Assistance allowances met only about 60 per cent of the cost of living at a minimum standard of health and decency for recipients of aid to dependent children, aid to disabled and general assistance.

Those receiving old age assistance fare better... They receive 91 per cent of the costs.

2. — About eight ninths of all needy persons receiving assistance are recipients of aid to disabled or general assistance.

Only about one ninth are old age assistance recipients.

"Thus about 8 out of 9 assistance recipients get 40 per cent less than the cost of minimum standards and only one out of nine receives as much as 91 per cent of this cost," the report states.

3. — The monthly maximum assistance allowance for a typical family of four persons is $77 short of the cost of the items intended to be covered by the allowance, $161, compared to $258.

4. — The monthly maximum allowance for a typical family of four persons is $280 less than a "modest but adequate budget" for a self-supporting family of four, $161 compared to $44.

5. — The monthly maximum allowance for an elderly couple is $16 short of the cost of the items intended to be covered by the allowance, $145 compared to $161.

6. — The monthly maximum assistance allowance for an elderly couple is $109 less than a "modest but adequate budget" for a self-supporting elderly couple $145 compared to $254.

Erie-Lackawanna
Business Increase

HOBOKEN, N.J. — Now that school is out the Erie Lackawanna Railroad is experiencing a noticeable spurt in the number of passengers travelling to the World's Fair, according to A. G. Oldenquist, general passenger traffic manager. After a relatively slow start when the Fair opened in April, there has been a steady increase in both individual and group travel, he reported.

Oldenquist predicted 60,000 passengers will ride Erie Lackawanna trains to and from the World's Fair this summer, many coming from connecting railroads west of Chicago. Some 4,000 passengers were handled in May. He expects July and August to be the busiest months.

The Erie Lackawanna is offering World's Fair travel inducements through special party fares, family fares, and all-expense package tours. As a general rule, prices include rail transportation, hotel room, bus transfer, admission to the Fair and sight-seeing trips while in New York City.

Robert G. Dixon
Is Guest Speaker

MT. POCONO — Robert G. Dixon, Philadelphia Life Insurance Company agent, Waverly, Pa., speaking for the Insurance Information Office of Pennsylvania, gave a talk on the part played in expanding the American domestic economy by life insurance funds put out for mortgages and other investments.

His topic was "Let's Boost Free Enterprise," and he spoke before the Mt. Pocono Rotary Club at their recent meeting in the Methodist Church. Harold H. Stralbecker, program chairman, introduced the speaker.

The talk revolved around the superiority of the free economy of the World's No. 1 Power, the U.S.A., over that practiced in the Soviet Bloc nations. The illustration used was insurance, of which in the field of life coverage alone there is today about $730 billion in force in the United States.

Mr. Dixon explained that this protection encouraged the American businessman to establish countless businesses and industries, by making its vast reserves available as investment funds. It provides private funds as opposed to government loans and controls.

Here's the Answer

QUESTION: We want to use enamel in painting our bathroom. Is this advisable or should we use some other kind of paint? Also, can you help us on color schemes? Should the ceiling be the same color as the walls?

ANSWER: Enamel is ideal for a bathroom, since its moisture-resistant finish prevents vapor from seeping through the walls and damaging the wood. It also can be washed frequently without damage. Trying to help you with your color scheme is difficult, because personal preference should be the primary factor in making a selection. However, if you are looking for flattering colors which enhance complexion in the mirror, try the pinks, roses and corals, as well as pure greens and golds. This is especially true where there is fluorescent lighting. The ceiling can be a contrasting color. A warm pink ceiling, for instance, provides a flattering overhead light reflection. The wicker hamper, waste basket and other wooden or metal bathroom accessories can be enameled to match the walls or one of the chosen accent colors. Where the bathroom is small and it is desirable to make it appear larger, enamel the trim and woodwork to match the walls.

QUESTION: I recently saw a bunch of silver-colored wings on the floor in a corner of our basement. I have been told that this is a sure sign of termites. Is this true?

ANSWER: It is one of the signs, but it is always possible that these may be the wings of flying ants. A flying ant has a body that is shaped like an hour-glass. A termite's body is thick from end to end. But since very few persons ever actually see a termite, you had better get those silver-colored wings to an exterminating company or an agricultural college immediately for an expert analysis. You have already wasted too much time.

Miss Jean Louise Canizaro Bride Of David Michael Trigiani

Jackson, Alabama— The marriage of Miss Jean Louise Canizaro to David Michael Trigiani of Bangor, was solemnized with a Nuptial Mass at Saint Peter's Co-Cathedral on Saturday, June 27, at 11 a.m. with Most Reverend Joseph B. Brunini, auxiliary Bishop of the Diocese of Natchez-Jackson officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Thomas Canizaro of Jackson, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Michael Anthony Trigiani of Bangor.

The ceremony was performed before an altar which held arrangements of white majestic daisies. On each side of the altar were tall stands of antique gold holding arrangements of laurel, rhododendron and magnolia foliage. Beside these stands of green and by the Communion rail were slender gold candelabra entwined with garlands of smilax holding tall white tapers.

Music was presented before and during the Nuptial Mass by Mr. William Wymond, organist, and Mr. Sylvester Macks, soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a traditional formal wedding gown of imported silk de soie in a soft candle-light tone. The fitted bodice, with long petal point sleeves and a Florentine neckline, was accented with delicate re-embroidered Alencon lace centered with matching silk handmade rosebuds. The straight front panel of the bouffant skirt had appliques of lace and roses scattered to the hem line. Back fullness of unpressed pleats with a floating train from the shoulder, extended into a chapel train. Her veil was a mantilla of imported Venice lace in matching candlelight tone. Her bouquet was a cluster of stephanotis, roses and fleur d'amour edged in dark green ivy leaves with a crescent cascade of white butterfly orchids.

The bride was attended by Miss Lyn Marie Hopkins of Jackson as maid of honor. Matron of honor was Mrs. John Richard Purdy of Huntsville, Alabama, the former Miss Christine Wright of Jackson. Bridesmaids were Miss Ginger Brides of Jackson and Miss Sue-Anne Badalucco of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

The bride's attendants were identically attired in dresses of all over embroidered Swiss organdy in white over pale blue taffeta with a square neckline and short sleeves. The waistline and sleeves were accented with tiny matching blue velvet ribbon over a controlled bell skirt. The headpiece was a pill box in matching blue taffeta. Their bouquets were old fashioned nosegays of white Boston daisies edged in leaves of green.

Acting as best man was Mr. Robert Canizaro of New York City, brother of the bride. Ushers were Mr. Joseph Gattina of Mobile, Alabama; Mr. Michael Ronca of Bethlehem, brother-in-law of the groom; Mr. John Purdy of Huntsville, Alabama; Mr. Michael Trigiani of Bangor, brother of the groom; and Mr. Ralph Stampone of Roseto.

The mother of the bride chose a sheath dress of imported raw silk in blush pink, accented with diagonal piping of moss green and a matching hal accented with a velvet bow. She wore a waist corsage of pale pink cymidium orchids with a trim of foliage green.

The bridegroom's mother wore mint green in a combination of crepe and lace. Her hat was an original design of matching crepe. A corsage of white phalaenopsis orchids completed her costume.

The brides' parents entertained with a reception at the Jackson Country Club following the ceremony. Floral decorations repeated the daisy theme, with a most of blossoms ranging in sizes from the miniature garden daisy to the large majestic throughout the ballroom. Centering the room was a circular table holding the tiered wedding cake, which was decorated on top with a nosegay of daisies.

Larger flowers caught garlands of smilax encircling the bride's table, two long tables radiated and featured asymmetrical arrangements of tall garland entwined silver candelabra, epergnes, the garland swags leading to bouquets of daisies. Brass chandelier candleabra marking the receiving line held slender white tapers and were entwined with daisy garlands.

Music was provided by William Wymond at the grand piano.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Emile Cavallo, Mrs. Charles McFadden, Mrs. Max McLaurin, Mrs. William Miller, Mrs. Warren Reimers and Mrs. Walton Shannon.

Serving at the bride's table were Mrs. James L. Enoch, Jr., Miss Ferrell McDade, Miss Bridget Maloney, Miss Laurie Hearnin and Miss Marjorie Buie. For traveling, the bride wore a white pique suit with brass buttons and black braid trim. Her accessories were of black patent with a black straw hat.

After a wedding trip to the Grand Hotel at Point Clear, Alabama, Mr. and Mrs. Trigiani will be at home in Detroit, Mich., where Mr. Trigiani is associated with the City Plan Commission.

Among the out of town guests for the wedding were Major and Mrs. De Witt Hooker of Jacksonville, Florida; Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Cappazola, Mr. Michael Caponigro, Mr. Faust Capobianco, Mr. Michael Russo, Jr. of Bangor, Pennsylvania; From Roseto, Pennsylvania, Mr. A. E. Cascaro, Mr. Anthony Stampone, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Dominic Ruggiero and Mr. Armen De Frank; Mrs. Donald Blackman and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Perin of Pen Argyl, Pennsylvania; Miss Roberta Limardi of Oak Park, Illinois and Miss Kathleen Podesta of Chicago, Illinois.

On the day before the wedding, Mrs. Charles McFadden and Mrs. Ellis Wright, Jr. entertained in Mrs. Wright's home with the bridesmaids' luncheon.

Out of town guests were entertained with a buffet luncheon given by Mrs. Walton Shannon, Mrs. Harvey Garrison, Jr. and Mrs. Warren Reimers in the home of Mrs. Reimers.

The Jackson Country Club was the scene of the rehearsal supper on Friday night, given by the parents of the bride.

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

And what is your mood today? Happy? Grumpy? Ah... there's a "statue" of you in our lovely International Gift Center, did you know?

Our Happy and Grumpy figurine is an appealing six inches or so of pottery, crafted in Hungary. His garb is glazed; his funny little tanned face is not... it is matte finish and rough. The easiest way to describe him is to say that he is Siamese twins, standing back to back, and wearing a huge red helmet. When one feels happy, the Happy figurine can be exposed to view by simply gliding the helmet onto the top of his head. It is fashioned in such a way it hides his sour features. Likewise, when one is gloomy and scowly, the helmet's position may be reserved.

It's precious... the sort of thing children would adore finding on a shelf in Grandma's china closet. The sort of thing a doting parent or grandparent might use to coax a tantrumy youngster into better humor... or that a wife might use in teasing her husband, when he begins growling at her after a worrisome day at the office. Honeymooners might use Happy and Grumpy in a silly way to tease each other out of the doldrums... and the two-faced little fellow might in time become a cherished family heirloom.

This is one of a delightfully varied shipment of pottery items from Hungary, and all have an irresistible charm. The price is 5.98, but at 1.98 we have small pottery plaques that hang from golden chains, and each has the outline in color of a child's face. Some are realistic... others are much as a youngster might draw eyes, nose, and mouth. All are eye-catching and smile provoking. My favorite shows two children. These would be most effective grouped on the wall of any room... living room, dining room, kitchen, or child's boudoir. Two of them would be a darling gift for almost anyone; particularly a fussy little girl who enjoys having unusual and pretty things for her very own.

Our International Gift Center is all aspartle once again with colored glass... a new shipment, featuring many reproductions of articles familiar in a bygone day. The toothpick holder has long disappeared from the family dining table... but we have it at 98¢ in amethyst or topaz, ready to hold cigarettes, a miniature bouquet, or simply to shimmer in the sunlight coming in a window of your home.

Our glass table also features a variety of colorful paper weights, reproductions of those that are now collectors' items. They are handsome. Many are filled with floral designs, but the most unusual is of satin glass gaily striped. Anna Haller says the original is now worth about 125.00. The reproduction is just 5.98.

While we're mentioning new things at Wyckoff's, I must make Ernie Michelbelder happy once again by mentioning that we now carry WARDROBES for our wish nik trolls, in our Toy Department. Imagine! The trolls themselves are 79¢ and their little costumes, for the Hunter Nik Troll, the Nurse Nik Troll, the Hare Nik, et cetera are the same. Bless my troll, those wish niks aren't worth any more than the clothing on their backs... but they're lovable.

Raw Decision For The Keed

LOS ANGELES—You see where they throw Kid Gavilan in the clink in Havana and you say to yourself that they blow their top down there, now arresting their own heroes.

All the kid does is stand on a corner, pushing a little religion, and they give him five years for conspiracy, which is more than the guys do who land at the Bay of Pigs.

Admittedly, you do not figure the kid as a man to be moving religion, because when you last hear, he is very fond of doing the mambo, the Rumba and the Cha-Cha-Cha, especially with girls.

In fact, he is a party who in his time could dance all night, and often did. It is an upset when the Castro find him with a soul-saving carmel, but they have to be bad people if they throw him in the clink, because the kid is not only a great welterweight champion, but a very patriotic Cuban, too.

When he is in the bucks and rolling big in society, he does not stay in New York. He says his heart is in Cuba, where he owns a chicken farm, and he ships his Cadillac convertible and his Chrysler station wagon to the island.

He is even better liked there than Kid Chocolate and Minnie Minsos and people follow him on the street like he is Santa Claus. For a lot of guys, he is, because he has a reputation when he has scratch as a very soft touch.

This real name is Gerardo Gonzalez, but they call him Gavilan, which means hawk. He once says that he has 100 fights before he even turns amateur. As a pro, he fights 143 times and is never flattened, because the kid is a very nifty guy with his dukes.

Good On Feet
He is very good, too, on his feet, due to his practice on dance floors, and you remember him in the early days of television by the high white shoes and the way he makes a bum of Chuck Davey, a lefthander the IBC builds up as a very important fighter.

In front of everyone on TV, the kid toys with his guy, even fighting him lefthanded, making two southpaws, then he powders him in the 10th and keeps his title.

When he isn't fighting for the chips, Gavilan is not popular with promoters who say he doesn't always try. One time a promoter screams that he kid will not give you a knockout for less than $70,000.

Well, he puts the title on the line against Johnny Saxton, who later winds up in the chukle house. Saxton is managed by Blinky Palmero, who is now in the pokey. The kid is managed by Frankie Carbo, but doesn't know it. Carbo, too, is doing time.

Frankie and Blinky are pals, and it is strongly suspected that Frankie has a big bet on Saxton, who gets a decision in Philip that is very questionable. He also gets the kid's title and never gives him a rematch.

Things get bad for Gavilan. He loses as often as he wins and we see him in 1957 at his last important fight, which is a 12-round elimination against a tough Indian named Gaspar Ortega.

The kid blows the decision. He was seated quietly in the dressing room. Suddenly, his new manager, whose name is Yamil Chade, jumps from his seat and starts to scream. . . "I make hereen' take! Thees his las' fight. They rob heem' no more!"

Chade takes Gavilan's boxing license from the locker and tears it to shreds.

"Keed," he says, "ceef you love me, you never fight again and you save me from electric chair."

"Meaning what?" we ask.

"I mean one day they rob heem' and I keel one of those jodges. And for thees I go to electric chair in thees con-try."

"Hokay, Yamil," says the kid, "thas enuff."

The kid starts to bawl. "Eet hurts here," he says, pointing to his heart. "Down here, eet tells me to fight no more."

The boys figure that Gavilan makes more than a million potatoes as a fighter, but they lay a price that he has nothing left except the chicken farm, and even that belongs to the Castros who have claimed everyone's chicken farm in the name of the government.

In his day, the kid has maybe 300 fights and the best he winds up with is time in the clink, all because he is patriotic and moves back to Cuba where he gets the religion.

You do not look for the kid to drop a bum decision in Havana, of all places, and if his manager sees this one, he goes to the electric chair for sure.

Net Hope Of U.S. Advances

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)—Defending champion Chuck McKinley of San Antonio, Tex., bounded into the semifinals of the Wimbledon Tennis Tournament Monday with a matter-of-fact victory over another left-hander, Abe Segal of South Africa.

In a center court match that rarely triggered much response from the crowd, the chunky American star eliminated Segal 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4. It was McKinley's fourth straight decision over a southpaw in this classic.

Germany's Wilhelm Bungert, cool, calm and deadly accurate, staged the upset of the men's singles quarter-finals by trouncing Rafael Osuna of Mexico, fourth - seeded here and the reigning U.S. champion, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

As Expected
Meanwhile, Australians Roy Emerson and Fred Stolle won as expected. Top - seeded Emerson eliminated fellow Aussie Bob Hewitt 6-1, 6-4, 6-4 and sixth-seeded Stolle defeated left-hander Christian Kuhnke of Germany, 6-3, 7-5, 6-3.

Wednesday's semifinals — McKinley vs. Stolle and Emerson vs. Bungert — will be rematches. Last year, Bungert toppled Emerson in the quarter-finals and lost in the semifinals to McKinley, who then beat Stolle for the crown.

Brazil's young Tomas Koch and Ronald Barnes very nearly upended third-seeded Stolle and Hewitt in a third-round men's doubles thriller, but the Aussies prevailed 3-6, 6-2, 6-6, 6-3, 6-4.

The four ranking women's doubles teams won third-round contests. Top-seeded Margaret Smith and Lesley Turner of Australia defeated Helga Niessen and Almut Sturm of Germany 6-1, 6-1.

Billie Jean Gains
Second-seeded Billie Jean Moffit of Long Beach, Calif., and Karen Hatzne Suman of San Antonio, Tex., defeated Mary Ann Eisel of St. Louis and Lea Pericoli of Italy 6-1, 6-3.

Third-seeded Maria Bueno of Brazil and Robyn Ebborn of Australia defeated Anna Dmirieva of Russia and Sonja Pachta of Austria 6-1, 6-2; and fourth-seeded Ann Haydon Jones of England and Rene Schurman of South Africa defeated Judy Tegart and Jan Lehane of Australia 7-5, 5-7, 10-8.

Jean Borotra, 55-year-old Frenchman once famed as the Bronding Basque, lost with Irene de Lamsault in the second round of mixed doubles. They were eliminated by Ian Crookenden of New Zealand and Miss Ebborn, 6-3, 6-0.

Young Net Star Likes Tour Life
By RANDY COLLIER
Associated Press Writer
SHAWNEE, Okla. (AP)—What's it like to be a nationally ranked tennis star when you are a 16-year-old high school girl?

Pretty Patsy Rippy of Shawnee thinks it is the greatest thing in the world. She's third-ranked nationally in her age group. "I wouldn't trade my life for any girl's in Shawnee," she says.

"Yes, they get to go to dances and have a lot of dates, but I figure going on the circuit every summer is much more fun and exciting," Patsy says gazing over her summer schedule.

"We are heading for Chattanooga, Tenn., first and then we go to Illinois, Ohio and Indiana. We'll end up at Forest Hills, N.Y. That's where I want to go the most."

Patsy will be escorted over the country by her coach and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Duffield.

Duffield has coached Patsy since she first picked up a racket seven years ago.

Does a teenage tennis player have time for other activities?

"Well, I think so. I'm in the school orchestra and am in some social clubs. I try to practice the violin and the piano every day," Patsy says.

"I've been on the honor roll for the past three years. I don't make straight As, but I think I do well enough."

Allison Sharpens Batting Eye Via Move To First

NEW YORK (AP)—Bob Allison must like the feel of first base the way he's getting on. The outfielder to first base full time this year and the current averages show him in first place in the American League batting race.

Rarely a consistent batsman in five previous big league seasons, Allison was shifted from year-old from Raytown, Mo., hit at a .586 clip with 17 hits in 29 times at bat. The surge enabled him to gain 32 points to .350 and move up from eighth place.

Allison batted .271 last season, his major league high. He wound up his other years in Washington and Minnesota with averages of .261, .251, .245 and .266.

Oliva Slumps
Tony Oliva, the Minnesota rookie who held the lead most of the season, dropped to second place at .330. The young outfielder slumped 17 points with only seven hits in 35 attempts.

Brooks Robinson of Baltimore remained at .324, but moved into the No. 3 position as Jim Fregosi and Mickey Mantle lost ground.

Fregosi, Los Angeles Angels' shortstop, slumped two notches to fourth after slumping 16 points to .321 with a 6-for-27 performance. Mantle had seven hits in 25 tries for the New York Yankees, dropping one place to fifth at .319.

The National League competition tightened considerably with Chicago's Billy Williams coming back to the pack. The Cubs' outfielder lost 22 points to .331 last week and now leads Pittsburgh's Roberto Clemente by only three points and San Francisco's Willie Mays by four.

Clemente Advances
Williams managed only five hits in 29 times at bat. Clemente advancing from third, gained 11 points to .348 with 13 safeties in 30 trips while Mays fell one place to third at .347. The Giants' star collected seven hits in 28 tries and lost 12 points.

Ron Hunt of the New York Mets remained fourth at .331. He picked up nine points with an 11-for-27 showing. Joe Torre of Milwaukee is fifth at .321. The figures include Sunday's games.

Harmon Killebrew of Minnesota slammed five homers, lifting his American League leading total to 27. He also took over the top spot in runs batted in with 59, collecting 12 last week and moving past Boston's Dick Stuart, who has 57.

Cy Barrett Says

Son Backs Mom

By Cyrus Barrett, Jr.
DEAR CY:
I am writing on behalf of my mother, who has been fired by a large chain store. After nearly four successful years as a clerk, she was fired for a minor error, which cost the store no money. I cannot believe a company expects its branch managers to fire employees for such unimportant mistakes.

WESTROM

DEAR WESTROM:
Personally, or via long distance telephone, talk to Mr. President at chain store headquarters. Relate details on the firing to him in an unbiased manner (if correct) could be uncommonly welcome, as top executives seldom know what goes on below them in human relations. This type of information sits downward, not up.

At lunch, recently, I overheard a college professor mention how an aging friend had unfairly been thrown out on the pavement by a large corporation. One dinner present took up the cudgel and phoned the firm's boss that afternoon. Fur-did executives flew. Within two days a squad of top brass landed at the airport and conducted a thorough branch office investigation. The fired man didn't get his job back, but the branch manager failed to keep his P.S. If an influential friend can intercede for your mother, ask him to. Many corporations feel situations like this are a serious growing business problem.

DEAR CY:
Your reader who said, "Knocking competition has never been good business" went on to criticize the U.S. employment service employees. On what does he base his feelings? LAURENCE

DEAR LAURENCE:
Perhaps another portion of this reader's letter will introduce you to his frustrations. He says, "Our industry (private employment agencies) is a rather small one in this country. Each agency, no matter how large, is only a small independent business enterprise."

"The United States Employment Service and its various state affiliate-satellites represent a very big business. And... whereas the average small businessman has the government's anti-trust division fighting potential monopoly, our potential monopoly competitor is an agency of the very government which is expected to protect the small businessman."

This is a very frustrating situation. We are indeed proud of our industry, and of its contributions which you cited so effectively. It worries, though, when officials who are supposed to oversee us in many states, state that they consider it THEIR business to put us out of business."

DEAR CY:
I just retired and need your advice. My net worth is $120,000 and I have $600 per month coming in for the next 5 years. After that, $375. My problem is shelter. We live in this small town among friends and relatives, but have too large a house.

There is nothing on the market here, like what we want. If we stay, it would mean building on nine acres of land we own. If we move to a nearby larger town where there are houses we'd like, we would be strangers. My doctor feels I should stay in this community, even if it means building. What do you advise, Cy?

VON LETTIS

DEAR MR. VON LETTIS:
Swallow your doctor's prescription and build a one story house. Be careful not to go overboard on costs. Consult mortgage lenders on your plans, to get their sense of balance and thoughts on financing. If you build on the nine acres, place your house so the property can be subdivided and other homes added. The project will possibly be so enjoyable, you'll discover yourself in a new business.

Nuclear Advance Exports Causes Re-Assessments

By Congressional Quarterly
WASHINGTON — Advances in nuclear technology are prompting reassessment of policies affecting the domestic electric power industry and the potential for exporting U.S. nuclear products.

The advances in reactor design and other areas, which promise nuclear-generated electric power at a price competitive with power generated by conventional fuels, were hailed by President Johnson June 10 as a "breakthrough."

Experts believe that the effects of the new technology will not be felt widely until the 1970s. Meanwhile, they predict a rapid growth for the nuclear power industry.

International Implications
Mr. Johnson drew attention to the potential international implications of the new nuclear technology when he announced June 23 that the United States and the Soviet Union would initiate talks in Washington July 14 concerning possible cooperation in developing techniques for the large-scale desalination of sea water.

His announcement came less than two weeks after he told a commencement audience at Holy Cross College June 10 that large scale nuclear power plants offered "a dramatic prospect of transforming sea water into water suitable for human consumption and industrial use."

The combination of economical water supplies and economical electric power should make nuclear power plants attractive to a number of foreign countries. Already, the United States has received indications that Pakistan, Rumania and Yugoslavia are interested in buying U.S. nuclear power plants.

The Atomic Energy Commission is currently urging Congress to authorize a program under which private industry — including foreign industry — could purchase uranium and bring it to the Government for "enrichment" to make it suitable for use in American-type reactors. The Government, which owns the only facilities for enriching uranium, would charge a fee for the service.

AEC Chairman Mr. Glenn T. Seaborg June 9 told the Joint Atomic Energy Committee that "enrichment" would "have a very beneficial effect" in encouraging "the selection abroad of U.S. equipment and services."

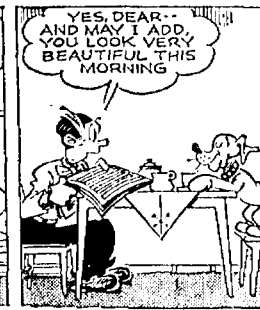

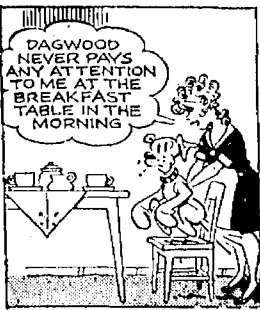

Other countries are developing nuclear reactors for power generation but, due to the scarcity of plants for enriching uranium, most of these use relatively inefficient unenriched uranium.

Private Ownership of Nuclear Fuels
Hand-in-glove with toll enrichment, the AEC is proposing that Congress modify the Atomic Energy Act to permit private industry to own nuclear fuels.

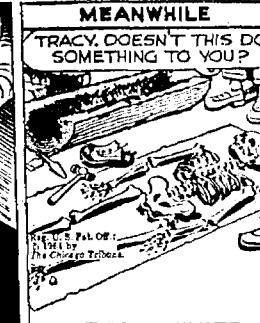

Currently, the law requires the Government to retain title to all special nuclear materials, which are made available to private industry through lease. Private companies pay the AEC a charge of 4 1/2 percent of the value of the nuclear fuels they maintain in inventory. This fee has come under attack by coal interests, who point out that it would normally cost a company 10 to 12 percent in "carrying charges" just to maintain its own inventory of fuel, whether conventional or nuclear.

They have suggested that the AEC increase the leasing fee in order to eliminate this subsidy, originally justified as stimulation for private development of nuclear power stations.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

October 22 to November 21 (Scorpio) — Make the most of your innate powers of concentration, and endurance of course, but don't drive yourself too hard. Give your able assistance rather than disparage those who are confused.

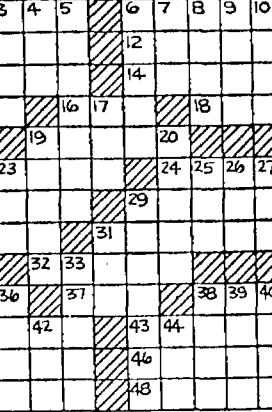

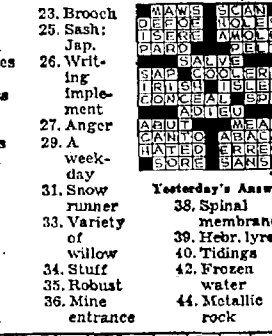

November 22 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Many a "smooth-working combination" runs into difficulty. Proceeding will not solve the problem but hard thinking willingness to make needed changes will.

December 22 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Watch expressions of time and space. Know WHY you are doing WHAT you are doing — and its consequences. Don't rush with the crowd; neither ignore its influence.
